A Level Spanish

Any modern language will give you a valuable extra skill to add to your other subjects, and is a definite advantage in today's global job market. You can combine a language with many other subjects at university.

Spanish is the third most spoken language in the world, with approximately 400 million speakers. It is the official language in 20 countries, in Spain and Central and South America, so there are plenty of chances to use Spanish in a global context.

Where will this course lead me?

Studying Spanish will give you excellent career opportunities and life-long skills in today's global market. Knowledge of another language makes students more employable by standing out from the crowd. Employers value the transferable skills that linguists demonstrate.

Spanish is a subject that can be combined with arts, business, law, science and many other subjects for entry into Higher Education. It prepares you for careers that require good communication skills in a global environment such as business, management, law, engineering, international marketing, teaching and journalism.
